Broadcom Remains Fully Committed to Acquiring Qualcomm Despite Qualcomm's Unwillingness to Meaningfully Engage and its Unilateral Transfer of Value to NXP Stockholders

ISS Recommends Qualcomm Stockholders Vote on the BLUE Proxy Card "FOR" Four Broadcom Nominees and States that Qualcomm Should Negotiate With Broadcom

- "The deterioration of [Qualcomm's] fundamentals, combined with the significant underperformance relative to peers and the SOX index, calls into question Qualcomm's business model, and what kind of long-term return shareholders should expect over the next transition to the 5G technology."
- "At this point, the best risk-adjusted scenario for QCOM shareholders would appear to be for the company to engage with Broadcom and seek to (1) close the NXP transaction at a mutually agreed price, which – absent a hell-or-high-water-like commitment from Broadcom – would provide Qualcomm with the next-best safety net of diversification, and (2) seek to negotiate a deal with Broadcom that would provide value that is both satisfactory and reasonably certain."

ISS Report – February 16, 2018¹

Glass Lewis Recommends Qualcomm Stockholders Vote on the BLUE Proxy Card "FOR" All Six Broadcom Nominees

- "At this juncture, given the Qualcomm board's repeated rejection of Broadcom's offer and our doubt about its willingness to seriously negotiate with Broadcom, we believe a change in the composition of the board is warranted. Moreover, given the incumbent directors' unanimous opposition to Broadcom's offer, we believe reconstituting a majority of the board would be necessary to kickstart the engagement effort."

Glass Lewis Report – February 20, 2018¹

Despite ISS and Glass Lewis Recommendations, Qualcomm Board Unilaterally Raises Bid for NXP to $127.50 Per Share

- Raised bid for NXP despite repeated statements that $110 is "full and fair" and despite not having obtained MOFCOM approval
- NXP was trading at $118.50 before Qualcomm's announcement
- Transfers $4.10 per Qualcomm share of value from Qualcomm stockholders to NXP stockholders

Broadcom Adjusts Offer for Qualcomm to $79 Per Share

- Broadcom adjusts price by $3 / share, even though $4.10 of value was transferred to NXP stockholders
- All other terms of Broadcom's proposed merger agreement remain unchanged
- Willing to increase offer by $3 / share more in cash if the NXP transaction does not occur

Having received a highly compelling offer with clear and favorable deal terms and substantial deal certainty, in the form of a signable merger agreement...

Qualcomm's Board has ignored its stockholders desire to secure Broadcom's value-maximizing proposal and ISS and Glass Lewis recommendations to negotiate with Broadcom

Instead, Qualcomm's Board has elected to transfer excessive value to NXP activist-led stockholders

The Timing and Magnitude of the NXP Price Change is Contrary to Qualcomm's Previous Statements and Led to a Significant Transfer of Value Away From Qualcomm Stockholders

Qualcomm Press Release

"Elliott's value assertion for NXP is unsupported and is clearly nothing more than an attempt to advance its own self-serving agenda. We remain fully committed to closing the acquisition of NXP and believe that the agreed-upon price of $110 is full and fair."

Qualcomm Responds to Elliott Regarding NXP – December 11, 2017

"We think $110 is a very full price, and I think, as you saw on NXP's earnings release, the management team there is also reinforcing that $110 is an attractive price for their stockholders as well."

George Davis, CFO – November 1, 2017

"We believe we're paying a fair price...their board agreed we're paying a fair price. We're going ahead with the transaction the way that we intended and we will see how this plays out."

Paul Jacobs, Chairman – September 13, 2017

Qualcomm's Existing Directors Have Taken Defensive Actions

Instead of Transacting with Broadcom, Qualcomm has Taken Defensive and Value Destructive Actions

- New severance plan implemented by incumbent Qualcomm Board and management is the epitome of entrenchment
 - If the current Qualcomm Board terminates employees, there is no penalty, but if a new Qualcomm Board takes the exact same action, it results in additional and significant costs to shareholders
 - This new severance plan raises even more questions given Qualcomm's $1 billion cost reduction plan and purported $500 million of synergies from NXP both of which undoubtedly will include employee layoffs
- Amended the definition of "change of control" for purposes of double-trigger equity award acceleration for all employees, including executive officers, to include losing a proxy fight
- Raised bid for NXP to $127.50 when stock was trading at $118.50; made this decision in spite of ISS recommendation for Qualcomm to collaborate with Broadcom on a mutually agreed price for the NXP transaction and to negotiate a transaction with Broadcom
 - Qualcomm had repeatedly described the $110 offer price as "full and fair"
