

The Regulatory Choice for Qualcomm Stockholders

Clarity & Commitment

- ✓ Acquisition history includes nearly $50 billion of transactions — completed antitrust merger clearance process for each transaction within 12 months, and has not failed to close any signed deals
- ✓ Committed to divest two main areas of product overlap — Qualcomm's Wi-Fi Networking Processors and RF Front End (RFFE) chip businesses
- ✓ Agreeing to take any other actions required by regulatory agencies with respect to Qualcomm's other businesses and assets subject only to the very high "Material Adverse Effect" standard (same standard used in Qualcomm — NXP agreement)
- ✓ Proposed an $8 billion regulatory reverse termination fee in the unlikely event that Broadcom is unable to obtain regulatory approvals
- ✓ Proposed a 6% per annum regulatory ticking fee on the cash portion of the merger consideration (net of dividends) if transaction is not consummated by one-year anniversary of entering into definitive agreement
- ✓ Working on Second Request (which was anticipated) from the U.S. FTC
- ✓ Close to filing the Form CO in Europe
- ✓ Have met with MOFCOM in China and have started pre-filing consultation process
- ✓ Remain confident in ability to complete transaction within approximately 12 months following the signing of definitive agreement

Track Record of Turmoil

- ✗ Nearly $4 billion in fines and behavioral remedies imposed on them in past three years from regulators in the EU, China, South Korea and Taiwan over licensing practices
- ✗ FTC lawsuit over same licensing practices now pending in U.S. federal court
- ✗ Predatory pricing investigation against Qualcomm still ongoing in the EU
- ✗ Engaged in more than 30 separate lawsuits with Apple in seven different countries
- ✗ Business conflicts with other customers, including LG, Nokia, Panasonic, Samsung, Huawei and Nvidia
- ✗ Nearly $1 billion payment to Blackberry in 2017 to settle arbitration over royalty payments
- ✗ Since January 2017, there have been nearly two dozen consumer class action lawsuits filed against Qualcomm in the U.S. alleging price fixing of microchips used in cellphones
